FOR RELEASE #10-014

January 28, 2010

Funding enhancements advance work on gender equity

WHITEHORSE – The Government of Yukon has enhanced the Women's Equality Fund, Marian C. Horne, Minister responsible for the Women's Directorate announced today.

"This funding increase is part of our ongoing commitment to address women's equality," Horne said. "This support will result in long-term stable funding for organizations working to meaningfully address the needs of Yukon women through education, skills advancement, leadership, research, advocacy and violence prevention."

Enhancements to the Women's Equality Fund mean that organizations working on behalf of women can apply for renewable, three-year funding for either operational or project needs. A recent evaluation of Women's Directorate funding programs clearly showed the need for long-term operational funding. Valuable resources can now be applied to longer term strategies to increase women's equality, support, safety and security.

"The longer term funding provided by the Women's Equality Fund allowed us to expand within the community and to plan ahead to deliver programming and annual events, rather than focus our time on seeking funding," Les EssentiElles director Ketsia Houde said.

Funding for the Women's Community Project Fund has also been doubled and proposals are eligible for consideration at any time during the year.

Enhancements to these two funding programs follow the 2009 doubling of the Prevention of Violence against Aboriginal Women Fund. This fund is for programs and events designed and developed to support Aboriginal women in all Yukon communities to reduce violence.

The Women's Equality Fund, first introduced in 2007 at $175,000, has been increased to $300,000 annually and renewed for 2010-2013. In its first offering, the Women's Equality Fund supported seven organizations.

The Women's Equality Fund application deadline is February 22. For more information, fund guidelines and application forms visit www.womensdirectorate.gov.yk.ca.
