Ten Yukon artists receive Advanced Artist Award

WHITEHORSE—Ten Yukon artists are the recipients of Government of Yukon funding to support their professional development in music, dance, writing and visual arts.

"We are very fortunate that Yukon is home to an outstanding array of talented and highly skilled creative individuals," Minister of Tourism and Culture Elaine Taylor said. "The Government of Yukon is proud to support the personal artistic development of established artists who contribute so much to our community and beyond."

The Advanced Artist Award helps individual, senior-level Yukon artists to participate in innovative projects, travel or educational pursuits. Each year, $150,000 is available through two annual submission periods. The spring 2016 intake awarded a total of $75,000 to 10 Yukon artists.

Whitehorse-based visual artist Simon Gilpin will use his $7,527 award to create a new body of work and experiment with new techniques and materials.

"It is invaluable to any artist when their skills and role in society are recognized, especially when that recognition comes from their peers. I look forward to the freedom to express my creativity that this award will allow," Gilpin said.

Daniel Ashley is a rapper, vocalist and electronic music producer. He is receiving $6,671 to study electronic music production and studio recording techniques at the online Warp Academy, in addition to completing six new original songs.

"I am always looking for new opportunities to develop as an artist, performer and teacher of electronic music and hip-hop culture," Ashley said. "With this Advanced Artist Award I can focus on study and composition so I can create a new body of original music."

For each intake of Advanced Artist Award, a unique jury of professional visual, literary and performing artists is selected to judge submissions. For the spring intake, the jurors were Marten Berkman, Lea Roy Bernatchez, Tara McCarthy, Al Pope, Amelia Rose Slobogean and Joseph Tisiga.

Lotteries Yukon provides the funds for the award. The Department of Tourism and Culture administers the award.

The next deadline for the Advanced Artsist Award is October 1.
