FOR RELEASE #10-159
August 20, 2010

Funding aimed at preventing violence against Aboriginal women

WHITEHORSE – Six organizations will receive close to $190,000 to help prevent violence against Aboriginal women, the Minister responsible for Women's Directorate, Marian C. Horne announced today.

"Reducing the incidence of violence against Aboriginal women continues to be a priority for the Yukon government," Horne said. "These projects will assist in supporting Aboriginal women to develop culturally sensitive approaches that meaningfully address the unique needs of each community."

The Prevention of Violence Against Aboriginal Women Fund doubled to $200,000 annually in 2009 in order to better support programs and events designed and developed by Aboriginal women and their communities.

"I am pleased that communities and organizations will have the opportunity to provide sustainable programming over a longer period of time," Horne added.

The Women's Directorate has contributed approximately $900,000 towards projects since the fund's inception.

The following groups received funding for 2010–11:

First Nation of Na-cho Nyäk Dun	$25, 000
Vuntut Gwitchin First Nation	$11, 425
Whitehorse Aboriginal Women's Circle:	$25, 000
Yukon Aboriginal Women's Council	$25, 000

The Fetal Alcohol Syndrome Society Yukon will receive $49,680 and the Tr'ondëk Hwëch'in First Nation will receive $49,297 over 2010–11 and 2011–12.
