CDF Projects Reach Across Yukon

WHITEHORSE – The most recent Community Development Fund (CDF) intake awarded over $720,000 to organizations and community groups across Yukon.

"The Community Development Fund is a very flexible funding option," Economic Development Minister Jim Kenyon said. "This flexibility allows us to support programs that help make Yukon communities better places to live."

The Village of Carmacks and the Little Salmon/Carmacks First Nation were awarded $66,542 to support their joint playground development project. The project will support the construction of a new playground in Tew Park and upgrades to an existing playground in the community.

"This funding will help us build a safe, healthy place for kids to play," Carmacks Mayor Elaine Wyatt said. "The new park is being built in a growing area of town and will see a lot of use by local children."

"This project is important to us because we have a new generation that has nowhere suitable to play safely," George Skookum, Little Salmon/Carmacks First Nation assistant finance director, said. "The new play equipment purchased with CDF dollars will not only enhance the appearance of the area but also contribute to the community families' well being. Through the partnership with the village we always strive for that goal."

This CDF intake also awarded the Yukon Arts Centre (YAC) $26,400 for the purchase of an integrated box office system to facilitate online information and ticket sales for events at the YAC, its gallery and the Old Fire Hall. The system will, among many things, allow the YAC to communicate event information to users and give arts patrons the opportunity to provide feedback to the centre.

YAC staff hopes the new box office system will eventually serve the wide variety of events that are presented throughout Yukon.

"CDF funding is critical to the success of this system, which will become a knowledge hub for our partners and patrons in the arts," Patrick Matheson, technical director of the YAC said. "The system will give Yukoners the means to receive information about the territory's events and purchase tickets online. In doing so, we hope that more people will be better able to attend and enjoy the works that are created by our northern cultural industry."

The Community Development Fund offers three funding levels. Tier 1 funding is available for requests up to $20,000. Tier 2 funding is available for applicants requesting $20,001 to $75,000, and Tier 3 funding is available for requests over $75,000 in funding. The next intake deadline is September 15 for Tier 2 applications.

Organizations are encouraged to contact the CDF office for assistance with their applications and for help developing project ideas.
